

Friends Honor Daniel J. Molloy

STATISTICIAN'S FAREWELL to Daniel J. Molloy, right, retiring Statistician of the Casualty, Fire and Marine Actuarial Department, came from Statistician Phillip Leibowitz of the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters. The occasion was a dinner honoring Mr. Molloy, attended by 173 friends and fellow workers at Hartford's Hotel Bond. Mr. Molloy served The Travelers 46 years.

letters from my father," Mr. Okazaki said, "I learned that students were being paid $2 a day by the Chinese Communists to take part in the riots. This is a pretty good wage for a part-time job in Japan."

The real reason for the demonstrations, he added, was not President Eisenhower's then impending visit to Japan or the U.S.-Japanese Security Pact, but a dissatisfaction among those in the Communist and Socialist Parties with Prime Minister Kishi's government and the Conservative Party.

General Elections

Mr. Okazaki was fairly certain that general elections would be called in the near future and that both the Communist and Socialist Parties would lose seats in the Diet because of their part in engineering the riots. The majority of the Japanese people do not share the demonstrators' anti-American feelings, he emphasized.

Repercussions from the rioting have already been felt by the Japanese export man, Mr. Okazaki said. "While visiting in New York City recently, I talked with several Japanese businessmen who lamented the fact that they had received several cancellations of orders from American businesses as a direct result of the anti-American feelings expressed during the riots," Mr. Okazaki explained. If this were to continue it would prove disastrous to Japan as the United States is his country's "number one customer."

Additional Markets

In speaking about the growing industrial output of his country, Mr. Okazaki said that if Japan is to find additional markets for her goods in the future she will probably look to Southeast Asia, Latin America and maybe even Red China.

He was quick to add that most Japanese people hoped if trade relations were established with mainland China and the Red Chinese government recognized by his country, that no political influence would be exerted by the Communist Party. "We would prefer to remain neutral," he added, "but this may be an impossible dream." He expressed doubt that his country would ever willingly fall into the Communist orbit, as Japan's traditions and way of life are not compatible with Communist philosophy.

Study at Travelers

Mr. Okazaki, who's interest at The Travelers was primarily in the area of Fire and Marine insurance, did not restrict his visits to just this department. "I am most anxious to grasp the complete picture of how a large multiple line insurance company operates," he said. His father's company is one of the largest fire and marine stock companies in Japan and has 28 branch offices operating throughout the country. Paid-up premiums for 1959 amounted to 1,600,000,000 yen or $4,444,444.

In his visits with Travelers departments, Mr. Okazaki was especially interested in the Engineering and Loss Control Division and its efforts to promote industrial safety and our new electronic data processing installation, the 501. The major difference between a Japanese insurance company and an American company Mr. Okazaki noted, is the mechanization techniques used in this country.

WTIC Aims for March, 1961 Opening of Broadcast House

WTIC's first broadcast and telecast from its new Broadcast House in Constitution Plaza are expected to be made on March 15, 1961, according to Paul W. Morency, President of The Travelers Broadcasting Service Corporation.

This optimistic estimate is possible, he said, because of a modern construction technique being employed in building the structure.

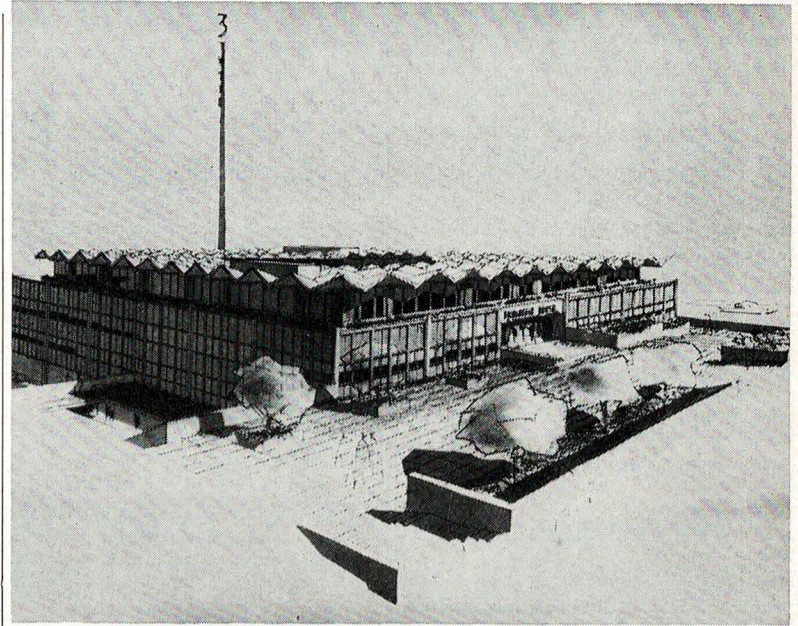

Broadcast House will have a concrete foundation and pre-cast stone walls, but the method by which its roof and floors are to be fabricated take it out of the routine construction job.

The roof and floor slabs are designed to be lifted into place after their formation.

After the basement floor slab has been poured, a plastic mat is laid over it and the first floor slab is poured on this mat. This procedure is repeated until each floor and roof slab is completed.

After a proper curing period, the slabs are then raised by hydraulic lifts into the proper position — the last poured representing the roof.

Channels for wires and plumbing are part of the pre-fabrication of each slab. It is estimated that from two and a half to three months of curing time will be saved by this process of building the floors and roof slab.

Each 15,000 square foot slab will be nine inches thick and weigh 800 tons. Each will be raised in two, 7500 square foot sections.

The building's roof will represent a departure in construction, also.

Its concrete will be poured over steel reinforcing bars which will provide additional support. Once poured, heavy wire, similar to bridge wire, will be run through channels provided for the purpose, pulled taut and secured at each end. Use of the wire permits this particular slab to carry a greater load than it otherwise might.

Mr. Morency said he expects the building to be sufficiently advanced so that equipment can be moved in starting December 1.

Robert Steele Begins Russian Tour July 12

Robert H. Steele, the son of WTIC personality Bob Steele, will spend nearly a month and a half in Russia this summer.

The June graduate of Amherst College leaves July 12 in a group of 22 students who are participating in the United States student exchange program.

An English major at Amherst, young Mr. Steele minored in the Russian language and is fluent enough to be spokesman for his party.

After flying from New York to Paris, the touring students will make stops in Romania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia during the train ride across Europe.

Old Recreation Area Purchased by HELCO

The Travelers old recreation grounds on Albany Avenue has been sold to the Hartford Electric Light Company.

In confirming the purchase report last month, HELCO vice president Charles L. Derrick said that within the next 10 years the light company hopes to use part of the 14-acre tract for a new sub-station.

Since it was discontinued as a recreation center, the land has been idle for many years. WTIC formerly had plans to locate its radio and television broadcasting facilities on the land, but later decided to locate them in Broadcast House at Constitution Plaza.
